CASE STUDY: Anita and Sunita were in the same class. Although they were in the same class, they were just acquainted with each other and their lives were quite different. Anita came from farmer's family. Her grandparents, parent and elder brother worked on their farm. They lived together in their house in the village. Anita was a good athlete and was the best long-distance runner in the school. She loved meeting people and making friends. Unlike her, Sunita lived with her mother in the same village. Her father worked in office in a town nearby and came home during holidays Sunita was a good artist and loved staying home and taking care for younger brother. She was shy and avoided meeting people. Last year was very heavy rain and the river nearby overflow into the village. Many houses in the low-lying areas were flooded. Sunita's house was also flooded and she came to live in Anita house with her mother and brother. Anita was happy helping the family and making them feel comfortable in her house. when the flood water receded, Anita's mother and grandmother help Sunita's mother to set up their house. The two families become very close. Sunita and Anita also become very good friends.
