Jai Hind! Jai Bharat!

It is our Independence Day. Let's celebrate our country's freedom in a great way. It gives us hope like the sun's rays, 'Jai Hind, Jai Bharat' we all say.

Freedom is not something that we easily got. For this independence, our freedom fighters fought. Our country's people struggled a lot. Struggles later we gained our independence.

We should value our freedom and independence. Our freedom is the fruit of the freedom fighter's great essence, and an independent country- "INDIA" was made, hence.

We all should value this precious day. Keeping in our mind all the sacrifices and struggles, We should celebrate this day with joy. We all must enjoy, "Happy Independence Day" we all wish.

Independence Day: A day to look forward

"S o long as you do not achieve social liberty, whatever freedom is provided by the law is of no avail to you" These words were spoken by Dr B R Ambedkar while he, along with hundreds of other men participated in the freedom struggle to put an end to the British Raj on India. The Britishers ruled over India for two centuries and subjected us to mistreatment, and exploitation and robbed India of its wealth and resources. The struggle against them was neither an easy nor a short one. Through years of hard work and dedication, and with the perseverance and bravery of greater men, India gained her freedom on 15 August 1947. Since then, India has come a long way and this year we, as a nation, will celebrate India's 77th Independence Day. The celebrations are nationwide, full of joy and a feeling of patriotism and pride floats through the air and on peoples' faces. On the eve of this, the President of India delivers an 'address to the nation' and the Prime Minister hoists the flag. This day is a salute to all the brave men and their sacrifices of the past, a celebration of present-day India, and a look toward future endeavours to raise the country to greater heights. It's a day when we as Indians should feel proud and celebrate with happiness and pride.

Lessons from the Past and New Beginnings

The Indian freedom struggle offers insight into the immense possibilities that exist in our nation. The collective consciousness of our countrymen projected an energetic desire for a healthy change. Nothing could stop them- not their poor financial status, their vulnerabilities, gender, or sect- nothing was a roadblock anymore.

Perhaps the struggle is the biggest inspiration, the Indian nation will ever need, and solutions came from within. The people are the biggest strength of our nation. We need not look at anyone to transform our lives. If we establish the intention to set the course of our lives with inner strength, we can succeed in anything. All we need is harmony among us. As the sense of respect for each other. A dedication to the job at hand. Rising above our limited selves we can be a little more committed, a lot more honest, and extremely enthusiastic about everyday life. In our small roles, each one will contribute to the building of a nation. Nations are built with thoughts- so let's think noble thoughts, with deeds- so let's be human, with knowledge- so let's be wiser. Change is the order of the day; it is our adaptability to it that will give us solid ground to stand upon. Each moment is precious, each hour is the hour of reckoning, and each day is a blank canvas waiting for our strokes. So, let's not be found wanting.
